1. In January 1951 the Soviet Union altered the Polish-German border across the island of Uznam (Usedom), giving the Poles a section two kilometers wide and six kilometers long near Ahlbeck (U54/L21). The German inhabitants of this district were given until the end of January to move out, taking with them whatever property they could. No Poles have been permitted to move into the area. The Soviets have blown up all civilian structures there, and are now building fortifications and radar installations in their place. There are no civilians in the area, but only Soviet army engineering units which are engaged in carrying out the so-called Hitler Fortification Plan, which the Germans never completed.
